The Milk Weaver

Children in some parts of the world are told bedtime stories about a maid who weaves milk into silk. Sometimes the maid is a crone instead, and sometimes she feeds the milk to spiders that do the weaving. She might also be a spider herself.

The thread she creates is soft and warm, with lustrous sheen and light as a feather. Clothes made from it cool the wearer when it's hot and keep them warm when it's cold. The woven milk also protects from harmful poisons and lightning never strikes the person wearing such wonderful clothes.

Milkwoven clothes

Wondrous item, very rare

A full set of clothing, or a sufficiently covering cloak, made of woven milk, makes the wearer automatically succeed on extreme heat and cold saving throws. Additionally the wearer has advantage on saving throws against contact and injury poisons, and resistance against lightning damage.
